Former president APJ Abdul Kalam emphasized on empowerment of the financially weaker sections of the society for India's sustainable economic growth. Kalam was at the Entrepreneurship Development Institute (EDI) on Saturday to inaugurate 'Aashray', a foundation set up to promote social enterprises.

Aashray is a techno-social business incubator for promotion of innovations, setting up of social enterprises, and scaling up innovative ventures and grassroots technologies. Interacting with the audience, he stressed on need for higher education, equitable distribution of resources, quality healthcare and a disease-free society by the year 2030.

Kalam stated that there were many international dimensions to the problems and several solutions. Hence, he added, working for the right solution is a collective responsibility the global community. Kalam explained that the challenges manifested in different ways based on local dynamics.

"Future will require a world where
