ENTREPRENEURSHIP requires a certain skill set, behaviour and attitude. Fortunately, these can be developed if you carry an interest in the field. This is where EDII's 'Entrepreneurial Adventures for Youth' and 'Entrepreneurial Stimulation for Children' workshops come handy. "The programmes are designed in a manner that only faculty with a PhD degree in psychology and behaviour science are involved in them, and aim to inculcate entrepreneurial traits," shared Dr Pankaj Bharti, Faculty and Camp Coordinator. This year, the institute is holding two batches of each camp with all four being residential ones. "Broadly, the programme is divided into indoor and outdoor activities, with self-assessment exercises, creativity and innovation, problem-solving, goal-setting, team-building, leadership, career counselling and interaction with achievers forming indoor activities, and yoga, multicultural prayers, thematic presentation, and cultural programmes serving as outdoor activities," Bharti added.
